Not enough gin in the former British Empire to wash the taste of that out of my brain.

Bad. Man.

Isn't there a time honored tradition of Fact Checking?
Wait, wait: Are you a reporter, or a journalist?

But if Duke had been here, we could have moved all the desks.

Whyever would you move desks around? It is much lighter, assuming compatibility, to switch the drawers. And you don't even have to be consistent.

Ahem, not that i have ever been caught doing such a thing.

Locks, man. Which would actually make it even better after you moved the desks. But it would have taken all night.

Alas, locks, that suggest at best crossing privacy lines that should be left alone even when they do get in the way of a good prank. In Gov offices there is potential for clearance issues.

Are all or just some of the drawers locked? Even two not equipped per desk allows one rotated right, one left, with more complex permutations for additional unlocked drawers.

But I generally respect locks until I have a damned good reason not to. Even the mickey mouse locks that most desks are equipped with.

Everything looked perfectly normal (which was scary enough) until I sat down at my desk.

Which was six inches higher than yesterday.

(The Cowboy claimed his was a great improvement. Wonder Woman pelted him with erasers until he issued a retraction.)
